How to Play "Never Have I Ever"

Learn how to play the never have I ever game. To play the game, a game-head is chosen for the round. This is the person who asks the group the question. The question starts with, "Never have I ever." And then continues with the prompt. For example, "Never have I ever gone on a blind date." The players who have attended a blind date either take a drink or have a point deducted.

The player to the right then takes over the round. And becomes the game-head. Asking the other players the next question. To prepare for the game, gather friends in a small group. And sit in a circle. Prepare each player by telling them we're going to play "never have I ever."

Questions can help the group to get to know each other. Have fun while playing! Make it an evening everyone will remember. The rules are simple. And can be molded to the player's desires.

Non-drinking game (points version)

In the non-drinking game, players have anywhere from 10 to 20 points. The game-head prompts the question. And the player has performed one of the acts in the question, they should deduct points from their total. The last player to remain in the game is the winner.

Drinking game version

In the drinking game version, players who have performed the acts must take a sip from their choice of alcohol. It's best to choose alcohol that allows for a long game. This includes wine or beer. It's recommended to stay away from using hard alcohol. This could cause injury or harm.
