How to Ask These Questions

There isn't going to be an opportune time to ask these questions. At the lunch table. Or during a first date. Or when passing one another at work or at school. Pick a time when your crush has a few minutes to spare. Be sure to make it light and fun. Don't pressure your crush into answering.

The time will present itself. And when it does, have a few questions from the list picked out. Pick out questions that you feel your crush will resonate with. Learn about who they are before asking the question. Do they have special interests? Are they introverted? Or extroverted? Learning about your crush before you approach them can be helpful. It can ensure the question they are being asked is something they're genuinely interested in or passionate about.

Before asking your crush these questions, take a deep breath. And calm your nerves. It's best to approach the crush with confidence. Once you're feeling settled, approach them and ask!
